

New mum... Ferne

'It's a girl' TV Ferne tells her followers

By LUCY JONES

EX-TOWIE star Ferne McCann gave birth to her first child last night – a girl fathered by alleged acid attacker Arthur Collins.

Ferne 27, revealed the news on Instagram by posting a picture of the sleeping newborn.

She wrote: "Welcome to the world my darling.

"Didn't expect to see you a week early. I'm so in love and bursting with pride. It's a girl."

Ferne split from Collins, 25, after his alleged nightclub acid attack.

He is on trial at Wood Green crown court accused of hurling the liquid in Mangle E8, in Dalston, East London, in April.

The scaffolder, of Broxbourne, Herts, has admitted throwing a substance over clubbers but denies knowing it was acid.

He also denies GBH with intent and ABH.

Anger at zoo jobs

A ZOO is suing intruders who broke into an enclosure and startled an endangered zebra.

Chester Zoo staff say the louts scared a Grevy's zebra, causing it to injure its hind leg.

Footage of the incident, in which the yobs branded their stunt an "overnight challenge", was posted on YouTube but has been removed.

Chester Zoo boss Jamie Christon said: "The small group trespassed and we are taking legal action.

"There was damage to property and they also startled a Grevy's zebra. Thankfully the animal is making a good recovery."

Choking care rap

A CARE home was fined £40,000 with £119,000 costs after a woman choked to death trying to eat bacon without teeth.

Dementia sufferer Carmen Barker, 80, should have been on a soft food diet with her meals put through a blender.

But staff at Ashmere Care Home in Sutton-in-Ashfield, Notts, had not even cut the widow's meal into small pieces.

They lacked training over a swallowing problem suffered by Carmen, who had no real or false teeth, Nottingham crown court was told.

Ashmere admitted a risk assessment failure.

DAUGHTO PILOT

BA 777 pilot team David Woodruffe, 64, and daughter Kat, 35, flew from New York to Heathrow on his retirement.

Mad-dash cam... speeds during the burn-up

Slowly does it... dropped-off car heads for airport gate

Fuming... chef Sean and his £50k Audi S3

AIRPORT VALET DID 131MPH IN MY MOTOR

EXCLUSIVE by STEPHEN MOYES

A CAR left with an airport valet parking firm was raced at 131mph minutes after the owner went on holiday.

Chef Sean Beckerleg, 30, found out when he got back from a week in Portugal and checked the dashcam of his £50,000 Audi S3.

He was horrified to see that moments after he dropped it off an employee drove it out of a Gatwick gate and hit 70mph on a 30mph road.

The speed then rocketed to 131mph on a 50mph dual carriageway.

Fuming Sean, of Gerrards Cross, Bucks, said yesterday: "What was even worse is at the end he clearly says, 'Nice! Very nice!'. He's talking about my car that he's just thrashed.

"I could have ended up with a speeding ban without doing anything wrong."

The five-mile burn-up saw the car doing 131mph barely 45 minutes after he headed into the North Terminal with partner Marta, 21, and their 18-month-old daughter Chloe.

The driver is clearly visible as he gets out to open the gate. Last night the airport said parking operator Empark had sacked him and told police.

A spokesman said: "The high expectations we have for all staff working across the airport were not met, for which we apologise."

Sean rejected a £70 refund and an offer of two weeks free parking, saying he had trusted the firm to park his car "in an orderly manner".

He said: "As far as I was concerned I'd gone on holiday and my car was safe."
